Breaking the Silence:

A courageous woman talks about her years as a battered wife so she can reach out to others who might need help and educate the community about this social problem

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff reporter

THE VIOLENCE had to end. It had started out with a little push here and a little shove there. Then shove turned to slap, and slap turned to punch and the fear inside of Elizabeth's heart began to grow until it threatened to overwhelm her. Hadn't she read somewhere that 60 per cent of female homicides were the result of pushing coming to much more than a shove?

Consider yourself a mother of two children who is married to man you love but who has little control over his temper. The verbal abuse is horrifying enough on its own, but lately there has been an episode of physical violence every four to six weeks. You have no money, no friends or family you can turn to and all you want to do is find a safe haven where your partner won't be able to find you. He's the one that has the car, he's the one who has the money, and he's the one who gets to stay in your nice home while you contemplate a life very much akin to that of a refugee.

But you're beginning to fear for your life and want to get your children out of such a violent home. The options before you would certainly seem bleak and yet this other woman, Elizabeth, perhaps your friend, your neighbour or your co-worker, had to find in herself the courage to make the step to safety.

Luckily for Elizabeth, on the morning her partner left for work threatening a violent end to their argument when he returned, she was able to phone Jude King, the counsellor for the Family Violence Safety Network. It was King who found her a ride far away from Haliburton County, told her where she could find a safe shelter at no cost, and then provided her with some money to add to the 11 cents Elizabeth had in her wallet. The route to freedom and safety was made open and yet Elizabeth may not have known it was there had she not turned to King for emotional support more than a year earlier. For having the financial ability to leave a violent home is only half the struggle; having the confidence to believe you can make it on your own afterwards is quite another.

Last week, Elizabeth wanted to talk about the circumstances which led to her flight from Haliburton County. She knows how much King has helped her, and she wants to reach out to other women who may be too afraid to call for help. During Break the Silence month, she also wants the community around her to understand the women who find themselves in violent relationships and continue to stay in them until they can take no more—or, more tragically, until the violence takes away their ability to do anything any more.

A need for equality

This was Elizabeth's second relationship, but with her first partner, it was Elizabeth who found herself in the dominant role and she didn't like it at all. She wanted a sharing relationship, one in which both the man and wife would stand on equal footing.

When she met David (these are not their real first names) she heard from his friends that he had a quick temper and had been known to get into fights. But there were good sides to him as well, and these were the parts of his personality she grew to love.

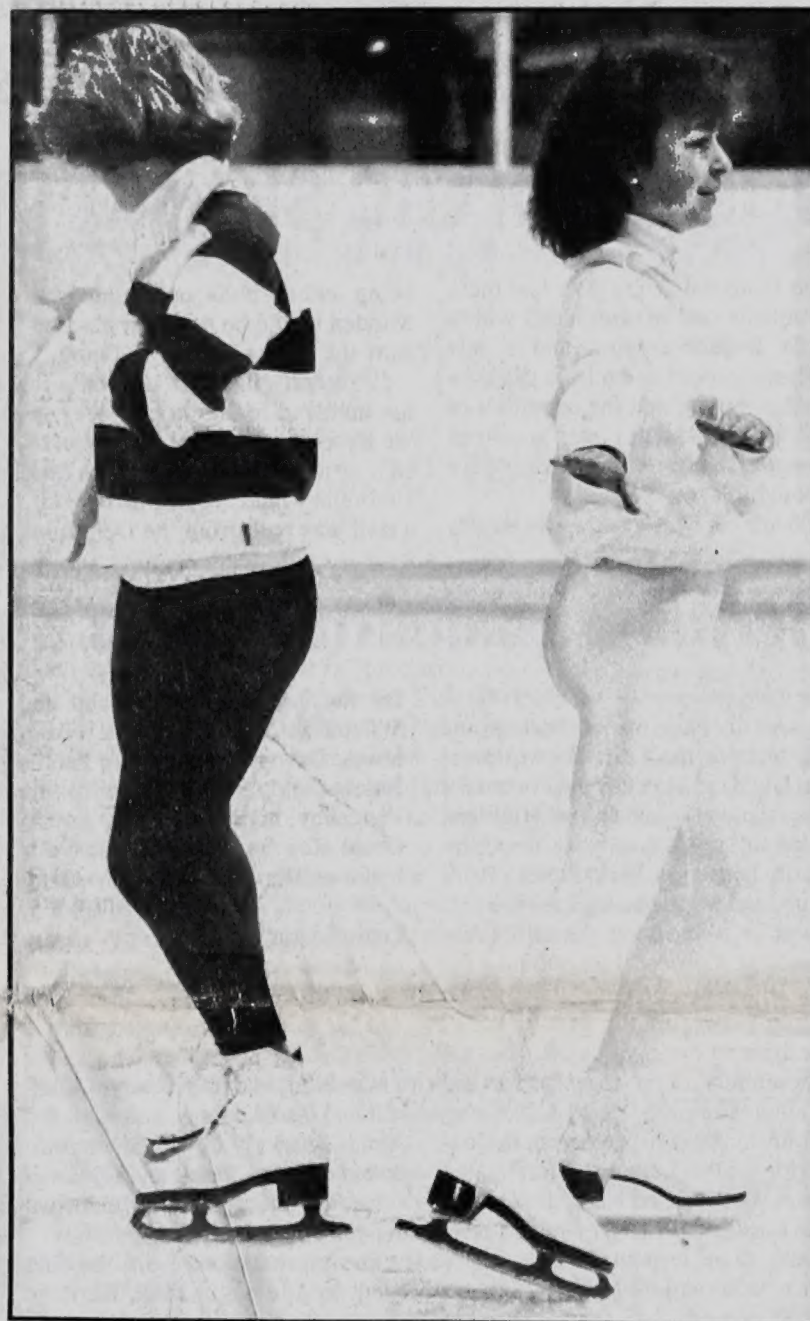

One day, before they were married, David hit her during an argument.

"I was shocked. I thought it was a one-shot deal. I told him you can't do that to me again," and afterwards he was indeed so full of remorse he promised her he would never hit her again. And Elizabeth vowed it would be her responsibility to bring out her fiancée's good qualities and let him know that women were not the same as cronies you disagreed with in a bar.

"I thought to myself 'This guy is not going to get away with that. He's going to see that's not the way you can treat a woman.' I thought I had the power to make him stop behaviour like that. I kept hanging in thinking I could help him. I wanted to be a success."

Society puts a lot of pressure on women to keep their homes happy and in one piece. One relationship had already failed and she had felt the public and family censure that came with it. She didn't want to be made to feel shame again and she thought enough about her powers of persuasion and reason-

Dazzling the audience at the Monmouth Arena on Sunday were guest skaters Abby Burk and Lisa Carr of the Minden Figure Skating Club. The 'Grease' Carnival was a great success and these two made it all the better.

Dysart's beauty attracts its newest clerk

Dysart et al will have a new Clerk, effective March 1. At a meeting last Monday, council passed a by-law officially appointing Donna McCallum of Mount Forest, Ontario to replace Wayne Wood, who decided to retire late last year after 29 years of service with the municipality.

McCallum is presently clerk-treasurer of the Township of Arthur, a position she has held for the past 11 years.

McCallum was born in northern Alberta, but has been a resident of Ontario for 18 years. She trained as a chemical technologist, but landed the clerk's job in Arthur Township because of a strong interest in and aptitude for accounting. She subsequently achieved her Association of Municipal Clerk Treasurers of Ontario certification, and has continued to take accounting courses.

McCallum said Dysart et al is a bigger municipality than the one she presently administers, and will offer new challenges, particularly in the area of municipal accounting, which in Dysart is now fully computer based.

Her decision to accept the Dysart posting was also based on the environment. "I'm not a city person" she said in a telephone interview, and she finds the landscape of the Highlands similar to that of northern Alberta.

McCallum has three children, ranging in age from 18 to 22 years old.

Minden agrees to improve ski trails

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff reporter

Because many businesses within its borders could benefit by attracting more cross country skiers into the area, Anson, Hindon and Minden council has decided to look into funding improvements to the Haliburton Highlands Nordic Ski Trail system.

There are more than 100 miles in the trail system, councillor Verne Graham told council last Thursday, and almost half of them are in their municipality. Last week, after several letters were sent to council asking for assistance, Graham went out on the trail groomer to have look at the condition of the local trails and "I was surprised with what I found."

One hill was so steep it scared Graham, who did not have to worry about flailing legs and poles as he descended. Skiers often walk down the hill because there is a curve at the bottom of it but the problem could easily be rectified by diverting the trail around the hill. In other locations where the trails are in poor condition, Graham believes the solution could be easily within council's financial reach.

"I think we'll have a really good ski trail," Graham addressed Mrs. Davis' Grade 4 class, which was in attendance at the meeting as part of its studies. With some improvements "the lodges will be happy and the skiing will be great."

In their letters to council, tourist operators outlined some of the other problems facing the trail system.

Because of a lack of funding, the 2.8 kilometre part of the Woodland Retreat Trail between Dennison Road and Heather Lodge has never been completed, the owner of the Highway 35 resort wrote.

"We have had some increase in business due to the Lodge to Lodge Ski packages this season, business which would probably have otherwise gone to the Lake Kashagawigamog area. The Lodge to Lodge ski tours are routed so as not to use the Minden Trail due to its poor condition and we transport skiers from Heather Lodge and Hart Lodge," write Bob and Heather Cairns. "We already advertise excellent snowmobile trails in our area. At the moment we can't do the same for cross country skiing. With help from Minden council and the HHNTS there is no reason why we shouldn't be able to do the same for

Conservationists honoured

A number of local people were honoured on Sunday for their contribution to heritage conservation in Haliburton.

In a brief ceremony at the Haliburton Highlands Museum, Dysart reeve Murray Fearrey presented certificates to more than 20 individuals and companies that have helped to improve the community's oldest buildings, many of which are included in the Heritage Walks that have become a popular local tourist attraction in the summer.

Yamafest to attract thousands

It's taken more than a year of planning, and the commitment of a broad cross section of the local business community, but this weekend, Yamafest '88 will come to Haliburton, attracting, it is hoped, thousands of snowmobile enthusiasts to a festival of fun.

The festival will get off to a big start on Friday night with a dance at the Dysart arena. Saturday's schedule is packed with activities, providing a wide range of choice and opportunities for visitors and local people alike to take in professional snocross racing, snowmobile rodeo events, guided safaris, a pancake breakfast, a casino night sponsored by local businesses with proceeds for Easter Seals, a Yamafest Ball at the Legion, and a bonfire and public skate at Rotary Beach.

On Sunday, most of the main events will be repeated, along with an Interantional Darts Tournament at the Legion.

For all the details on Yamafest '88, see the special 28 page supplement to this week's Echo. Then come on out and enjoy!

Karen Elstone, left, completes one leg of a relay in the COSSA qualifying cross country ski meet in Haliburton last Thursday while Sara Stouffer gets set to begin the next leg. Haliburton's trails will be the site of an OFSSA meet next Monday and Tuesday. For more on the racing, see page 6.

THIS WEEK

POLICE NEWS

from Minden OPP

During the week of February 8 to 14 officers of the Minden Detachment investigated 35 general occurrences and eight traffic accidents with one injury.

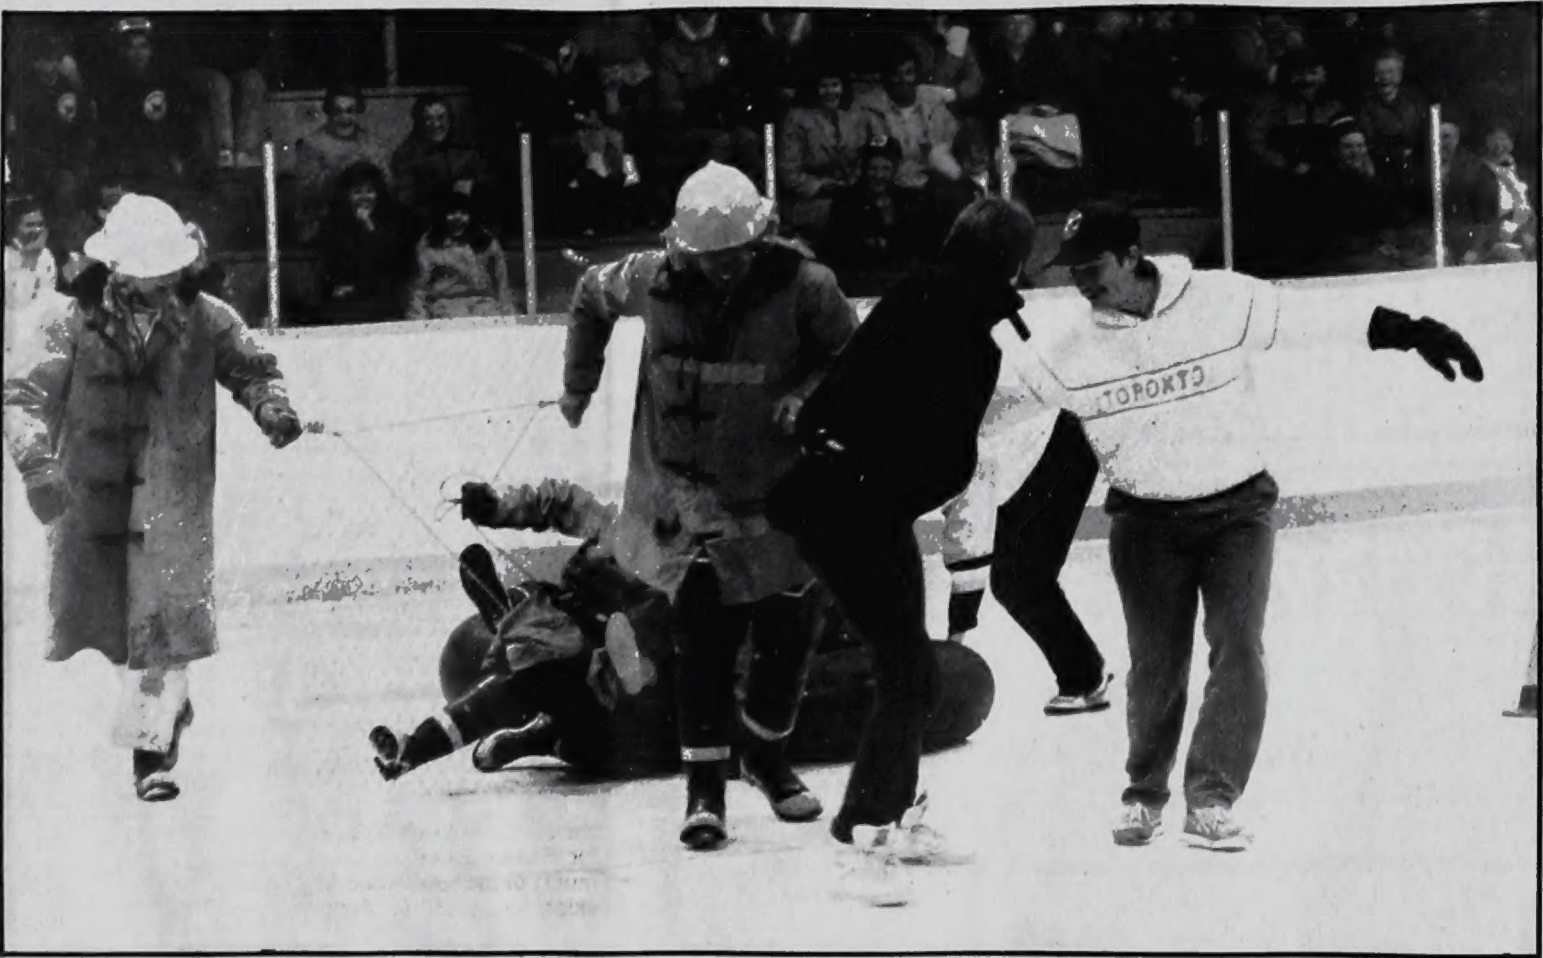

Break and Enter Investigation Leads to Charges

An investigation into several Break and Enters, reported on January 5, resulting in a property loss of $1570, has culminated with three persons charged.

Glen Reid, age 26, and Charles Weitzel, age 25, both of Haliburton, have been charged with Possession of Stolen Property. Glen Reid has also been charged with Possession of a Narcotic. The third person involved in Kevin Staner, age 24, of no fixed address. He is now the subject of an arrest warrant.

Break and Enter Cleared By Charge

Break and Enter investigations dating back to December 1987 have been cleared with the arrest and charging of two persons. David Richards, age 24, of Cobocok, and Sean Camirand, age 20, of Kirkfield, are charged with Break and Enter and Theft and will appear in Provincial Court in Lindsay.

It's a good thing the Monmouth Firefighters are faster at getting to fires than they are at competing in Sunday's tube race in Wilberforce. Of the five teams it was the Wilberforce IGA sliders who could best negotiate the slippery turns cross country ski trails and draw more skiers to our area."

In the lodge to lodge ski tour's first year, there were only four skiers to take advantage of the offer. Now that the package is more well known, and there has been an article about it in the Hamilton Spectator, there have been 50 skiers who have booked one of the different packages.

"This is a significant increase in business over a one year period not only for the resorts but also the spin-off business that other retailers receive," writes Robert White of Hart Lodge, who adds that his business could improve even more with better trails. Some of the guests have complained about the trails, which his staff help to groom with the association's alpine snowmobile.

"The trail from Minden to Hart Lodge in general is quite good and exciting with the exception of two very large hills approximately 2 km north of Minden. As a matter of fact, neither we with the alpine snowmobile nor the Bombi have been able to go over the top of these hills this year to groom or track set. At the bottom of a few other hills, the trail either turns or there is a very rough section such as rocks or creeks that scare the skiers. We feel these problems can be eliminated with a little bulldozer work and a few culverts placed and a little fill," he writes, noting that the condition of this trail and the fact there is no trail from the Dennison Road are not very good "image getters."

White believes that the two motels being either built or planned in Minden would be the ideal place to start the Lodge to Lodge skiing.

"Presently the Red Umbrella is not involved in the ski packages as we have no trails near our property," writes Lyn Stevens. "The Red Umbrella would become involved if a trail was built from the Dennison Road to Highway 35 and then hooked up to the Minden Trail at Hart Lodge. Then with improvements on the Minden Trail we would have a totally linked system between Haliburton and Minden which would encourage more skiers thus increasing tourist dollars for the whole community."

Improvements to the trail are also endorsed by the Scenic Highway 35 Association, which sees them as a way to increase tourist traffic in the off season.

In his letter, the president of the Nordic Trails Association, Jim Andrews, thanks council for its support in the past both financially and "in other ways."

"In the future, it is hoped that lodge to lodge ski packages can be expanded and that the level of participation will increase. As well in the future, a loppet or citizen's race from Minden to Haliburton or vice versa is envisioned. This loppet would eventually attract up to several thousand skiers and be a very important attraction to recreational skiers in North America," write Andrews and race committee chairman, Karl Hartwick.

One of the other improvements they would like to see is a better and wider bridge over a tributary of the Gull River which can only be crossed by a small foot bridge. "This bridge is too narrow for our present grooming equipment as well for a loppet event if it were to start in Minden. The ideal solution would be a bridge wide enough for at least six to eight lanes of skiers to accommodate loppet events (25 to 30 feet) or another route around this tributary."

Heritage committee plans numerous activities Saturday for the Lucas house; Bishop and Wilson for the Alexander Niven house; Dawson Insurance for Paull's Butcher Shop; Helen Archer for the Pengeley house on Park Street; Grant Rae for restoring the Potts house on Highland Street; the Guild of Fine Arts for the railway station; Leah Austin for the Ritchey House on Maple Ave; Betty Hodgson for the William Roberts house at Park and Maple; the building committee of St George's Anglican Church for a new addition to the rectory; Campbell and Bernice Ross, and John and Agnes Spencely for the Speir compound on Park Street; and Dysart et al for the restoration of the municipal office.

The presentations were the first event in a series to mark Heritage

Week. This Saturday, a number of activities are planned to help people recognize and celebrate the community's heritage and historical roots.

Between 1 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. films from the Haliburton County public library will be shown, along with a display of children's heritage posters in the lower level of the Stedmans Mall.

From 2:30 to 3:15, a heritage walk will travel to Bank's Store. It will be led by Douglas Hodgson, and will include free mulled cider for participants.

The final events of the day will be held at the Rails End Gallery. Champion log cutter Buck Cowen will display his prowess. There will also be a display of historic toys and photographs, folk art demonstrations and traditional crafts by Wendy Bateman, Claire McLeod and Maggie McClure. Prizes also will be presented to the winners of the heritage photo contest.

Snowmobile accidents rise

Snowmobile accidents investigated by the Ontario Provincial Police have increased dramatically in the province for the second winter in a row.

Last winter (November 1987 to April 1987) the OPP investigated 15 snowmobiling fatalities, almost double the figure for the previous year.

So far this year, 12 people have died as a result of 10 separate snowmobile accidents.

Courtesy training offered

A new programme to teach public relations skills to people in the hospitality and retail industries will be given its local debut on March 1 and 2. Designated the "We'll Make You Feel Incredible" programme, it is being promoted by Ontario's Ministry of Tourism and Recreation as an offshoot of the "Ontario-It's Incredible" advertising campaign.

Dave Phelps of Moore Lake Inn, who will teach the local sessions, says the main aim of the programme is to enhance people's awareness of the importance of the tourism industry, and to instruct them in some key hospitality skills.

While the emphasis is on tourism, the reach is broad. It can encompass everyone who deals with the travelling and vacationing public, and that includes retail and service business owners and employees, as well as people directly involved in the accommodation business.

An enrolment limit of 20 people has been set for Day 1 of the programme. The morning session will begin by outlining the importance of tourism, which now accounts for more than 400,000 jobs in Ontario, Phelps said. As well, it is estimated that every dollar spent directly in the tourism sector generates two more dollars in associated services.

Skarama raises $10,400

Haliburton's second annual Skarama raised more than $10,000 for Ontario handicapped youngsters on Saturday, more than $8,000 of it from a single participant.

The event, sponsored by the Rotary Club of Haliburton and run on five and 10 kilometre loops at PineStone Inn, will bring in a total of $10,446 if all of the pledged funds are received.

Livio Mascarin, a Toronto area man who also was on hand for the first local Skarama last year, brought pledges totalling $8,050 from almost 100 people. Mascarin and his father are involved in the construction industry, and most of the pledges came from business contacts. His efforts on behalf of Ontario's handicapped youngsters have not gone unrecognized. When Mascarin completed his ski last Saturday, Peter Arnott, director of service club relations for the Easter Seals Society, presented him with a framed photograph of this year's Timmy and Tammy, citing his outstanding achievements in supporting the fund raising efforts of the Society.

Mascarin said he enjoyed his ski, and promised to return for next year's local Skarama.

Trails were in excellent condition for the event, having been groomed early Saturday morning after a fresh snowfall.

Haliburton Rotary's Skarama raised more than $10,000 for Easter Seals and one participant accounted for much of the total. Livio Mascarin, centre, of Toronto, skied for $8,050 in pledges. Peter Arnott, left, of the

Workshop dispels myths of child sexual abuse

by MARTHA PERKINS

Staff Reporter

The video was just starting when the little girl, not more than a year old, crawled up to the floor space in front of the television screen. As she stared at the women sitting in the library at the J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School, with that expression of wide-eyed innocence and honesty only young children can muster, the women were watching the commentators speak from the screen above the toddler's head.

The words being heard spoke of a facet of society most people prefer not to think about: 100,000 Canadian children have been sexually assaulted; 85 per cent of the offenders were people they knew and of those, 40 per cent were father figures; children have no defenses against these assaults unless adults give them the tools; and the sexual assault of children will cease when children learn they can respect their feelings and their bodies.

But then one of the psychologists mentions the case of a man who tried to have intercourse with a three-month-old baby. Your mind goes back to the child playing on the floor and you shudder. That innocence and trust you saw in her eyes, and in every other child's eyes, can be so quickly and irrevocably removed. You shudder again when you realize that behind those statistics are real girls and boys and as much as we might like to pretend it is otherwise, ignoring this social problem will not make it go away.

Perhaps the reason why there were so few people at the parents workshop on Child Protection, held last Monday night in the school library, is because this is indeed a subject most people would like to ignore into oblivion. It's one thing to keep warning children about those mythical "dirty old men" who'll offer you candy in parks, and quite another to accept that that "sexual fiend" might be an outwardly normal—and respected—neighbour, friend, relative, preacher, or community leader.

"They're very nice people in other respects, they're just terrible in this one aspect (of their personality)," the video commentators said, and while they did acknowledge the fact that most molesters are known to the children, they still focused more on streetproofing children from those strangers on the street.

Three questions

In practical terms, three questions children should always ask themselves if asked to do something by a stranger are the following: Do I have the yes feeling or the no feeling; Does someone know where I am; Can I get help if I need it?

'Our belief is prevention is the key,' a group of concerned parents is told

"I don't think you'd ever have a problem" of finding victims, said one convicted offender who lost count of the number of young girls he's approached. All he had to do was drive along a street, any street, and beckon them to his car. If they responded to his questions and actions there was a molest, and if they said no and walked away "there's nothing I would have done."

The problem is that children are taught not to say no when an adult, a figure of authority, asks them to do something. Attackers will pick children who seem the most helpless and vulnerable because the submission of these "good" little boys and girls will make them feel all the more powerful and in control. When a child defies him, that illusion is shattered.

That's why it's so important to teach a child he or she has rights, that they can listen to their inner "good feelings, bad feelings" and make others listen to them too.

"We're not taking their innocence away," says a self assertiveness trainer in the video. Most children have watched enough television and have heard enough stories to know that there are some people out there who want to harm young children. Most adults could be trusted, but it is learning how to protect yourself from those who can't that is important. "They want the tools to deal with these situations... We don't want to curb openness but avoid improper conduct."

Confusing messages

In a world where the line between what's proper and improper is getting thinner all the time, it's getting more difficult to teach children what conduct is considered normal. As one of the commentators pointed out, so many of the messages children absorb from advertisements, television, photographs, newsstand magazines, and the media are sexual in nature. What's worse, younger and younger children are being shown in a sexual context.

"No one has given her a value system in this area," the commentator says. Instead, the images teach her that "girls are sexually willing." Therefore, if she responds to those images, "She's not looking for sex, she's looking for acceptance."

All children want to feel accepted, either by their family or peers. When the abuser is also the one who gives them that feeling of being wanted, loved, and cared for, the emotional complexities of the abuse get tangled up in the trauma.

"It's hard to believe a good feeling is part of a bad experience," said Gena Robertson, the intake worker of the local Children's Aid Society. She was at the meeting explaining some of the myths about child sexual abuse and how parents can help identify it. One of those myths is that the abuse always feels bad.

"It can be mixed in with confusing feelings," she said, adding that bodies are made to respond to physical touches and that the abuser might combine the sexual assault with all kinds of love and affection the child needs.

Other myths she talked about were as follows: 1. The cases of child sexual abuse in Haliburton County are rare. Statistics say one in three girls and one in four boys will be assaulted, and she has no reason to believe the statistics would be any different in Haliburton. She does an investigation about once a month and the youngest child, whom it was verified had been sexually abused, was only nine months old. "It happens a lot." 2. It usually happens to teenagers. Most victims are between the ages of 4 and 11, although "children any age are vulnerable." The problem of identifying pre-schooler victims is there is very little access to them for the abuse to be discovered. Many other times, a girl won't find the courage to tell someone her story until she is in her teens. 3. The abuse is a violent attack. An offender will usually use "non-violent persuasion to get the confidence and trust" of the child and then gradually build up the intensity of the abuse. It may start with fondling and remain at that stage for a year, or it may slowly but surely make its way towards intercourse. 4. The assault is a single instance. Of victims, 85 per cent of them have been subjected repeatedly to the abuse. In a study of 403 offenders, it was estimated they had abused 67,000 children. 5. Abuse only happens in isolated places, woods, parks and playgrounds. Secrecy is important, but that can be attained in bedrooms, bathrooms, yards and homes.

Signs to watch for

As to the signs to look out for, Robertson forewarned that what's important to keep in mind is the intensity, duration and frequency of any changes such as: being reluctant to go to a particular place or be with a particular person; showing unnatural interest in genitals; having Venereal Disease; sleep disturbances; fears of the dark; refusing to change in front of others; a sudden increase or decrease in appetite; and having a lot of new fears.

If a child is identified as being a victim, the CAS will work with the child and family to help negate some of the trauma. With young children, anatomically correct dolls are used while older children are interviewed directly. "There are ways of doing that which will promote the healing process and be gentle for the child."

When Caroline Bishop, a member of the Haliburton Child Abuse Prevention committee, which sponsored the workshop, addressed the women, she told them that while you may be sorely tempted to find out for yourself "who done it", this task is best handled by the CAS workers who have far more skills at dealing with these problems than a parent faced with the fact their child has been abused.

"It really matters how this is handled and if you're directly involved with the child it will be much harder to handle," she said. Disclosing details about the abuse will be difficult enough as it is, and parents

Heritage

On Sunday, more than 20 local businesses and individuals were honoured for the contributions they have made to preserving Haliburton's heritage. All of them were the owners or the governing bodies of buildings included on the heritage walks that have become such a popular part of summers in Haliburton.

It is fitting that this small gesture of appreciation was carried out at the Haliburton Highlands Museum, the most prominent repository of Haliburton's heritage. Like the buildings featured on the heritage walks, the museum embodies the co operation and generosity of local people who believe that the artifacts our past can communicate some of the spirit of those earlier days, giving us a sense of perspective with which to comprehend the present.

The physical evidence of Haliburton's historical heritage is not especially impressive. The village evolved as a relatively poor community on the fringes of agriculture, its economy fueled by logging and physical labour. Haliburton cannot boast the grand Georgian and Victorian houses and storefronts that still grace many small communities in southern Ontario. Until recently — and with the notable exception of the Irwin Store (now Banks), whose successive owners have recognized the value of its mid nineteenth century character — there has been little effort to preserve the physical evidence of the Haliburton that once was.

Dysart et al's decision to restore the old municipal office building rather than tear it down was one important step. It was followed by the restoration of the railway station to become the Rails End Gallery. Both of these efforts were recognized in Sunday's awards.

The main impetus for preserving that's left of Haliburton's heritage has come from a number of local people, most notably Leo Dobrzensky, whose book 'Fragments of a Dream' brought the community's past solidly into the present, and opened new doors to understanding the historical importance of many local buildings.

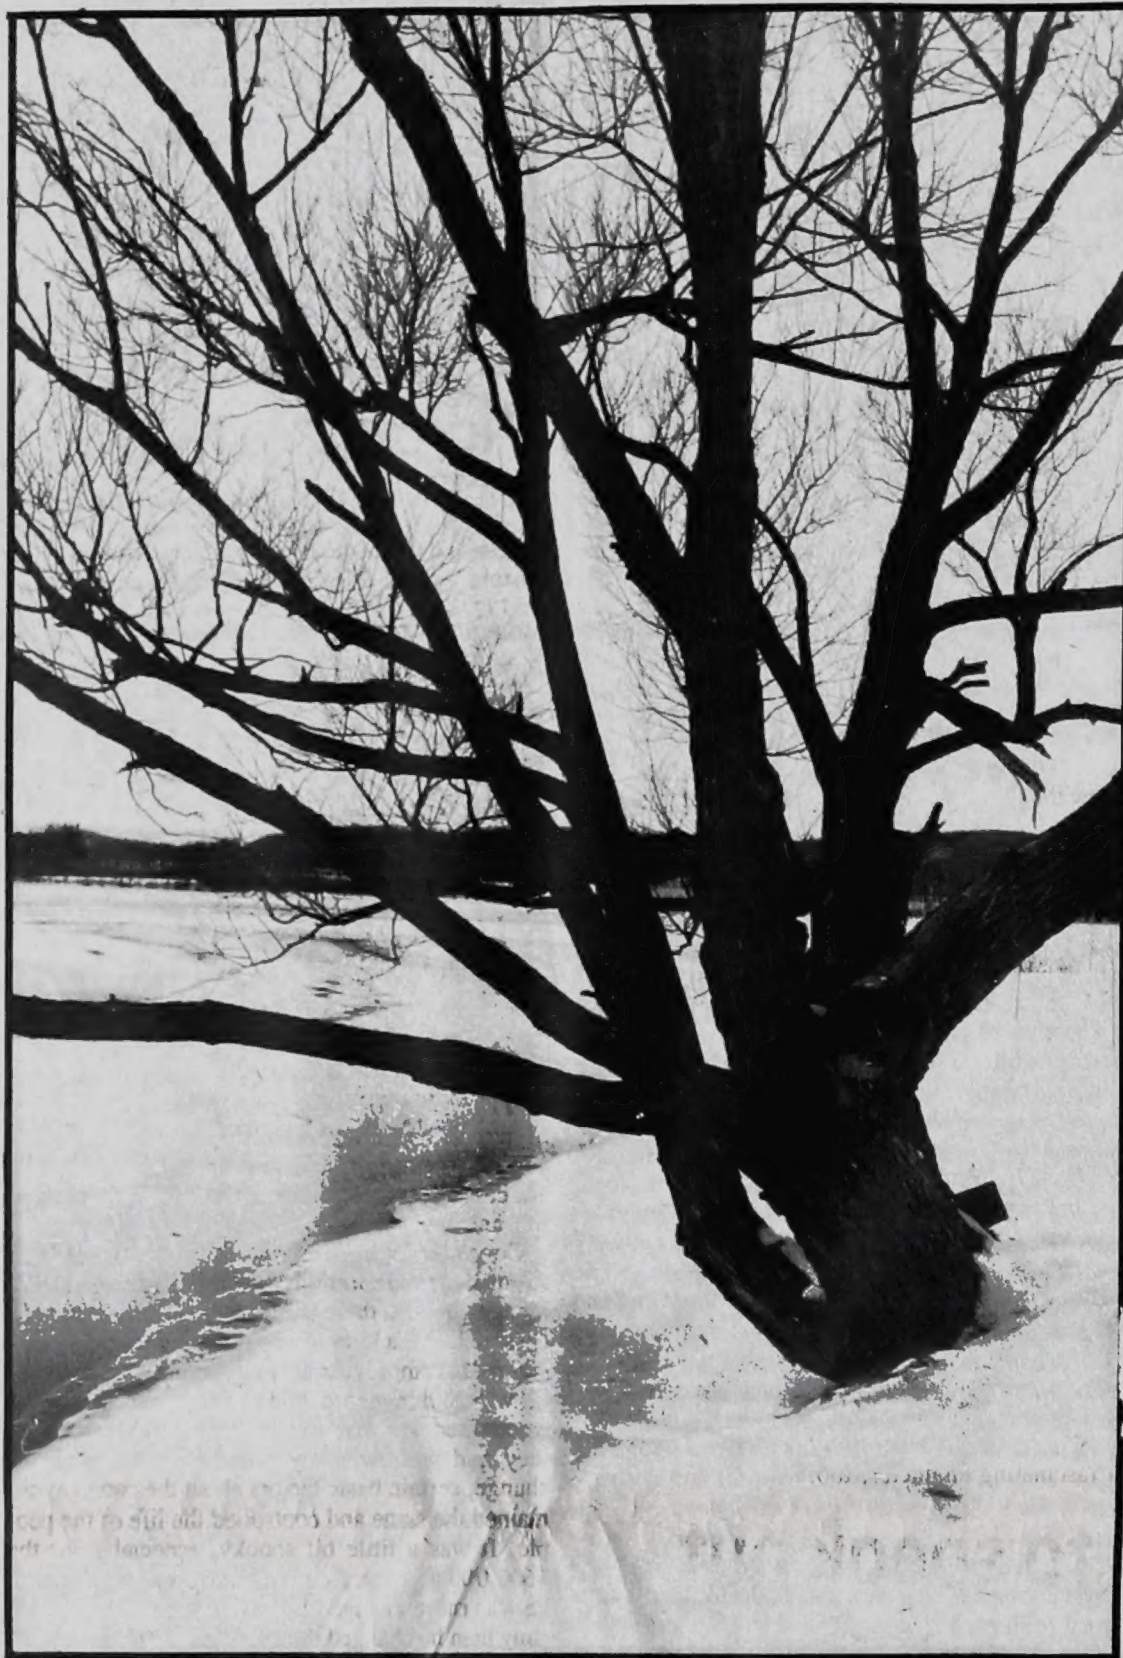

All of the people who were honoured on Sunday have contributed to preserving the past that Mrs. Dobrzensky and other interested citizens have shed light on. A past that once appeared lost to all but the most devoted researchers of local history, has been brought to the attention of local citizens and visitors. And the community is richer for it.

Changes

Some major changes in the system of county government are in the wind, but they won't be implemented for a while yet, and it appears local politicians will have at least one more chance for input before changes are legislated.

In November, an Advisory Committee on County Government presented its report to Municipal Affairs minister John Eakins. Many of the committee's recommendations would have a direct impact on Haliburton County. The most significant of these would alter the basis of representation from assessment to population. If that happened, only townships with more than 2,500 electors would be allowed a second representative on county council. This would alter the balance of power at county council somewhat — and arguably, that's no bad thing, since in the past, some small municipalities have been reluctant to support progressive ideas if they involved the expenditure of money, which they almost always do. A change in representation would also shift a heavier workload onto reeves and deputy reeves of the smaller municipalities, however. And it would also reduce opportunities for deputy reeves to 'learn the ropes' at county council before becoming reeves, breaking a chain of experience that can be important to the smooth operation of county government.

Because the changes recommended in the report are significant Eakins has decided to form a task force and seek more input from county officials. No doubt local county councillors will want to make sure their opinions are considered in the province's deliberations.

Parents want to have a 'think tank'

from Echo readers

To the Editor:

Home and School has been asked to present the views and suggestions of parents regarding a solution to the increasing enrollment in the primary and senior elementary schools in Haliburton. This presentation is to be made to a committee of three members of the Board on April 12.

We believe that all people with children in all 'Feeder Schools' (Victoria, Gooderham and Wilberforce), at J.D. Hodgson School and parents of preschool children are all affected by the decisions regarding a solution. Also, taxpayers in general are a consideration of Board members, therefore, they may want to be a part of the process.

When we consider that the community will have this one opportunity to make a presentation, the responsibility seems onerous.

We, therefore, have scheduled a two meeting process to prepare our presentation. On February 22 Home and School will hold an open "think tank" to constructively think of positive solutions that we hope will come from a group meeting. It will be held at Haliburton Arena, upstairs, at 7:00 p.m. Following that meeting questionnaires will be circulated to those attending, given to all school children affected and issued in the Echo.

The March 7 meeting will be when results of the questionnaire and "think tank" suggestions are presented to everyone for their familiarization. It will be these sources that will enable us to truly represent the feeling of our community.

We encourage everyone with an opinion to participate. Your ideas need to be heard for the Haliburton Home and School to represent everyone's views. Anyone wishing to assist in distributing information, collecting questionnaires or other tasks related to this presentation is encouraged to call: Jane Selbie—457-2586, Diane Jackson—754-3571, Pat Cummings 457-3233 or Rachel Fearrey—457-1955.

See you February 22!

Yours truly,

Jane Selbie,
President, Haliburton Home and School Association.

Editorial commended for its balance

To the Editor:

Congratulations on your Editorial, January 20, dealing with the wolf bounty question. I have been involved with various animal rights movements for several years, but I can not recall a more honest and forthright and balanced appraisal of this controversial issue than your article.

Also the letters from various readers shows a growing awareness of problems relating to man's place in our total environment. Thank you for giving this important matter so much consideration. Many newspapers shy away from most controversial issues.

If I did not have a very painful, broken right arm, I would love to enter the fray.

Yours truly,
Helen James,
Cardiff, Ontario.

P.S. We enjoy all aspects of your newspaper. Congratulations to you and your staff on your various awards for excellence.

Vulnerable children

To the Editor:

"Don't talk to strangers" is a common warning given to children by parents concerned for the personal safety of their children. Although well intended, the warning ignores everything known about those who commit sexual crimes against children and, if anything, leaves the child more vulnerable to exploitation.

The term "stranger" is confusing to a child and misleads the child into believing that he or she should only be cautious of people who have an unusual or

FEIR PLAY

THE BIG weekend will soon be here. Everyone has been talking about Yamafest 88 for weeks now and we find that it's only two days away. Yes Yamafest 88 Ontario's Family Snowmobile Rodeo and Winter Festival will be held at Haliburton this coming Friday, Saturday and Sunday February 19, 20 and 21. It will be a weekend filled with a lot of great things to do: snowmobiling, races, dances, a casino, bonfires, games, great food and a rodeo. This week we will be placing extra copies of the special Haliburton County Echo Yamafest 88 supplement, which appears as a section of this weeks paper, in many business places and other key spots and it's free for the asking. In this section we have attempted to bring you up to date on what you can expect to see and do at this weekend big event. Make sure that you pick one up. Proceeds from this non-profit event will be donated to the Easter Seals Society of Ontario and the Haliburton Hospital Expansion Fund. So come on up to Haliburton this weekend for the time of your life. It's Yamafest 88.

It has been a very busy winter here in the village of Haliburton. There seems to be work for everyone and things are booming. Just look around and you will see buildings going up here, there and everywhere and they tell me that it is hard to find help here at the present time. It seems that new businesses are opening up everyday and we understand that many new businesses from out of town are looking for business locations in the village. Jasco Drug Mart's new drug store opened it's doors for business on Monday morning in Peter Curry's new building next to the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. Eccentric Wardrobe opened in their new location in the former Michael's Restaurant building last Friday and Kountry Kids will be opening their new store at the same location very soon. Work is still continuing on the new addition to the Village Shoppe and the owner of the business, Sylvia Holland, tells me that she will be having a Grand Opening in the not too distant future. What a difference from a few years back when one could make a buck in the summer months and nearly starve to death through the long cold winter. It's a different story in 1988.

A few news items... Mr. and Mrs. Don Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Davis and Mr. and Mrs. Mike Vuksic have returned home following a two week vacation on the island of Curacao, which is just off the coast of Venezuela... We are happy to report that Cliff Dawson returned to his home here following a stay in Hospital... Rev. and Mrs. Grant MacDonald of Kitchener, Ontario, were visitors to their cottage on Drag Lake last week... We are sorry to report that Maxine Curry is at present a patient in hospital.

The Anglican, Baptist and United Churches in Haliburton are joining forces for combined Lenten services every Wednesday evening starting at 7:30 p.m. from February 17 right through until March 30. The sermon topic at each service will be "The Shadows of the Cross". All are welcome to these services which will alternate between the three churches. Tonight (Wednesday February 17) it's at the Anglican church with the theme Shadow of Guilt.

Art Ouellette informs me that he found a set of keys at the outdoor rink at Rotary Beach. There are several keys on the ring and the owner, we expect, would like them back. Phone Art at 457-1006.

Several of the snowmobilers in the Municipality of Dysart et al area are complaining that they are far from being satisfied with the condition of the trails in their area. We have heard them say that they are getting fed up with paying dues to the Haliburton County Snowmobile Association and finding that the trails are not being groomed. They point out that in the Dorset, Huntsville and Dwight area that the trails are in good condition and they don't have the equipment that we do here. The snowmobilers in the Haliburton area want their trails groomed properly or they are threatening to withdraw their membership.

The Haliburton and District Lions Club tell me that they are planning to hold a Garage Sale at Banks General Store Market in Haliburton this coming Saturday February 20. They are also planning on serving hot chili at this same location in conjunction with the Garage Sale and Yamafest 88.

According to the Haliburton County Home Support Services Winter Newsletter, two new activities are being introduced at the Drop-In Centre at Haliburton. The Centre is trying to generate County interest in Duplicate Bridge. If you are a Bridge player you are invited to come out and try it. The other new activity is Line Dancing. Was one of your New Years resolutions to become more active? If it wasn't, it should have been. They tell us that activity creates a better quality of living. Line Dancing is being held at St. George's Anglican Church Hall in Haliburton on Thursdays at 10:00 a.m.

The Rotary Club of Haliburton asked me to remind you that they will be serving up those delicious pancakes and home made sausages at the Rotary Pancake Breakfast this coming Saturday February 20 at the Royal Canadian Legion. Doors open at 7:30 a.m. with proceeds going toward Crippled Children. The admission is adults $3.50 a plate, children under 12, $1.50.

POINTS OF VIEW

Autocrat or meddler, fascinating man

The View From Here

by
Harvey Clarke

LAST WEEK, I gave you a bit of background on Jack Kent Cooke, Toronto high school dropout to billionaire owner of the Washington Redskins. I mentioned a couple of sports column about him that ran on the same page earlier this month.

Ken McKee's piece ran along the football club's party line that he is a 'hands off' owner, who hires coaches and general managers and leaves it all to them. I suppose, at 75, with all his enterprises, the leopard could change his spots.

Jim Proudfoot, on the other hand, tells tales that sound more like the Cooke of story and rumour, in sports and broadcasting as well. It concerns a defenceman named Larry Brown who played for his Los Angeles Kings.

Cooke, who was then living in Las Vegas, and listening to his team play on the radio, sent word to the coach that Larry Brown was no longer to play for the team. As Proudfoot says, "He did things like that."

This particular anecdote tells that, because he needed him to play, the coach talked the play-by-play announcer into referring to Brown by a different name, so the owner wouldn't know.

All went well until Larry Brown scored a goal, and Cooke heard the announcement by the public address announcer in the background of the broadcast. Needless to say, the coach was in trouble.

Even before I worked at CKEY, I knew that Jack Kent Cooke owned the Toronto Maple Leafs American Association baseball team. He was famous for having a telephone in his private owner's box that connected him with the coach at the player's bench.

If the game wasn't going to his liking, he would get mad and before long he would get red and agitated. Then he'd pick up the phone and call the coach. In would go a new pitcher for the Leafs.

It wasn't long before the old Toronto Telegram noted that pitching changes were being orchestrated from the owner's box, and from then on, whenever the fans weren't happy with the way the game was going they'd start to chant: "Get on the phone, Jack! Get on the phone!"

And he would.

In broadcasting his mysterious likes and dislikes led to many strange incidents. As far as I can figure, as in the case of Larry Brown, no one ever pinned him down and made him explain why he suddenly had the player in his bad books.

I worked with Cooke's old program director at CKEY in my early years there, and he would tell tales of being phoned by the then-owner to say that he didn't like the announcer that was currently on the air, and he wanted him 'out of there.'

Don would be expected to be at the station within the hour with a replacement announcer from the regular staff, ready to take over the music intros after the newscast. No explanation to the listeners while there was another, often flustered, announcer calling the tunes.

Meanwhile, Don would have worked out what the 'former' deejay was entitled to in pay, and Jack Kent Cooke would be writing him a personal cheque for the money he was owed. The program director was then supposed to watch him while he cleaned out his desk, collect his key, and escort him to the door!

A little autocratic, perhaps. Maybe could be considered interfering with the operation? Hardly a 'hands off' operator in those days, but never really asked to explain what was on his mind. Might show you the door, too.

I had an assistant there who was working out a contract he had signed with Cooke, clever lad that he was. Seems he was an announcer that Jack had heard while stuck in the Winnipeg airport one night. Did his entire six-hour overnight show in rhyming couplets. Honest.

Cooke thought it was so great that he signed him up for CKEY. Of course, when the gimmick wore thin after a few months, he wanted him off the air. Couldn't fire him because of his contract, so shuffled him off into a promotion job till it ran out.

I suppose it goes with the territory, but such autocratic people have another side which, it seems, along with his charming style, has made Jack some solid friends and fans.

Because, while he would fire one guy in a minute, he would go to any extremes to take care of another employee if the spirit moved him.

One engineer, who developed problems with his sight, was shipped to doctors all over the U.S. and Canada until someone could be found to successfully operate on his caracats. Cooke paid the bill personally.

He took the wife of one sports announcer out and helped her pick out a new home, and made arrangements to buy it for her. He also saw to it that the mortgage payments were taken out of paycheck so he wouldn't drink them up, too.

Autocratic? Paternalistic? A meddler? All of these. But a fascinating character, too.

PIC OF THE PAST

by Creighton Feir

One of the most colourful characters in Haliburton's history was Sir Sam Hughes, the Minister of Militia and Defense in Sir Robert Borden's cabinet during World War One. While he made the headlines in city papers, he was finding rest and relaxation at his summer home, Glen Eagle, on Eagle Lake with his wife, son Garnet and daughters Robie and Aileen. The original house burnt in 1920 and was rebuilt with an addition of a barn, thought to be the first beamless barn in the county. He also had telephones installed in the houses surrounding the house—perhaps another first. The building was used as a summer home until 1937 or 1938 and sold by the Hughes estate in the early 1940's. A couple of owners later, it is now a renovated resort, Sir Sam's. Divining a church's prevailing spirit

AS OTHERS SEE IT

by Bob Giuliano

EVERY CITY is said to have its own spirit. The spirit of New York, Chicago, Toronto, Montreal. Whatever that spirit is, when you are there you very quickly get caught up in it and not only are carried along by it but add the energies of your life and personality to it.

Corporate executives are talking in a similar way about their corporations and industries. They are recognizing that there is such a thing as a "corporate personality", a kind of spirit that constantly shapes and molds employees and perpetuates certain ways in which things are done. What the executives discovered was that no matter how many meetings they had or how many plans were designed for change, certain basic factors about the company remained the same and controlled the life of the people. It was a little bit spooky, especially for the $600,000 a year executive to discover that usually he was more changed by working in a given company than he changed the company. High level decisions often only change the place cosmetically or in appearances, making a name for this hot-shot or that one, but in fact there was a mysterious spirit, personality or ghost that mitigated against any basic changes in the place.

Preachers have known for centuries that this is true of churches. They are called "angels" (sometimes 'angels in the air'). They didn't mean those half men, half women creatures with wings and halos and dust, but a pervading, controlling spirit of the church, the gathered people that must be solidly addressed and faced if there is going to be any changes.

In the book of Revelation the churches are not addressed by the Son of God, but the Angels of the churches, the controlling life-giving or life-denying spirits.

The apostle Paul spoke of the corporate personalities as a 'principalities and powers' words that reflect our way of speaking about 'the system'. Some are powers that raise up and dignify human life and work towards the new and others are prevailing spirits that crush and smother life in clinging to the old. Paul talks tough to the powers, recognizing that they exist outside of people's control but at the same time it is the life together of a people that creates the kind of angel that prevails there.

Let me illustrate a bit. I went out to talk to some folks in the south end of London the other night and told them I didn't know if I wanted to preach there until I got a good sense of what the angel of their church was like. I've stood toe to toe with angels who would scare you to death in my prison years (not all angels are good), so I don't go around thoughtlessly taking on just any old prevailing spirit. Well those folks were unbelievers and kind of laughed at me. So I said, "Look, let me go into the church sanctuary for five minutes, turn on all the lights (I don't like meeting them in the dark), and when I come out of there I'll tell you what the 'corporate' personality or angel is of your church".

Most were a little bored with the idea and wanted to get home to watch the hockey game or something, but a majority agreed. They thought I was going to produce a set of cards and call up the dead or something. There's no trick to it, everyone gets the sense of these prevailing angels wherever they are, and in churches, especially 125 year old churches, it's easy.

I didn't have to be in that little church five minutes to know that the prevailing spirit in there and who had been there for a very long time was the spirit of deception, lies and pretense. Now I had a problem. What was I going to do? Go and tell those nice church folks that the prevalent angel of their church was a lie? The 'Deceiver' had been running the ship for a long time. You could see it with your eyes, you didn't have to have all of these very special spiritual gifts that I am endowed with. (Some other time I'll tell you what to look for.) If I went back to the meeting and told them they were a lovely faithful people and the Spirit of Truth prevailed in their life together I would simply have fallen victim to the deception that lived there, yawning, day after day.

So, back I went and told them the truth. There was deep sorrow in my heart as I reported to them what I had found there and I told them that too.

There was a long silence in the room and then an 88 year old woman in a jogging suit, who had been going there since she was a child, confirmed the truth of it by unwinding a lovely, but tragic story of her father's struggle many years ago to call the people to the truth of their religion and the truth of their lives. She cried a little and folks got very uptight. Finally, we agreed together to set out to change the controlling spirit, the angel of the church and to redeem the powers of that angel over the lives of folks who worshipped there.

I'm telling all of this to get to another angel, another prevailing spirit that works on us quite differently. When we come to Haliburton there is a gracious spirit that pervades the hills and the lakes and the people. The spirit of Haliburton is one of hospitality, friendliness and warm welcome.

During our Christmas holidays, Betty and I were again caught up in the swell of gentle friendships, open and honest conversation, the excited hugs of chattering children and the fellowship of a long table of life giving bread. The sparkling cold nights with deep, earth cleansing snow reflected the beauty of natural and healing gestures of people whose controlling angel is one of peace and thankfulness.

In Haliburton, asleep or awake we feel held in the loving hands of a just and benevolent Creator Spirit.

Oh, I know that all is not sweetness and light there and that often evil lurks dangerously close to the surface, but even in the presence of tragic circumstances and life defeating events there is a controlling spirit that heals and strengthens and draws people together into a harmonious common life of bearing the burdens in truthfulness together.

The Deceiving Angel doesn't spend too much time in Haliburton. She is mostly hanging around easier victims in the cities and towns that prefer the lie. Haliburton angels are given life by the people and by nature there and they are both beautiful.

A woman's courage to speak out

Sunny Side Up

by
Martha Perkins

WHEN ONE TALKS of courage, it's usually in the context of some daring and adventurous deed. But there's another kind of courage being demonstrated this week when a woman tells the people in her community what it is like to be a silent sufferer of a crime no one wants to 'get involved' in.

The Echo has talked about family violence before, but one of the problems in just citing statistics and theories is that the whole issue seems removed from the realities of Haliburton County. That sort of thing happens someplace else, to other people, not to the friendly, cheerful dwellers of the Highlands.

One can't ignore 'Elizabeth's' story in the same way. Those neighbours she once begged to help her might be the people sitting next to you in church. Those people who turned a blind eye to the fact Elizabeth always had a black eye are the same people you stop to chat with on the street. These things do happen in Haliburton and because of its size, it's not really an anonymous problem; it's just something people feel is not their business. If a woman was punched by a stranger on the street, then they'd get upset, but when it's her husband, it's a family matter.

Every time I go to an interview, I'm never quite sure how people will respond to my questions. With Elizabeth, I just had to channel the conversation in a certain direction and she took off from there. She had obviously thought a lot about the violence and how she felt to be at the receiving end of it so the answers simply poured out. She opened up her soul and her private thoughts with the hope she might be able to help other battered women while at the same time encouraging the rest of the community to have more compassion for these women. After knowing what those silent years were like, she knew it was time to 'get involved' and I'd like to thank her again for being brave enough to do it.

I also think it's time to acknowledge the silent workers of this community who so rarely get the recognition they deserve. We all know the 'Movers and Shakers', the people in business and politics who are always involved in this or that and are often seen smiling in the pages of the Echo. These people are important but someone also has to be willing to help those people who aren't smiling because they have not been given the chance to.

For want of a better term, I'll call them the Defenders and Supporters, hitherto known as the Champions of the Underdog, Bleeding Heart Liberals, Armchair Psychologists or Do-gooders. I'm afraid of mentioning them by name in case I leave anyone out, but then again, they're used to not getting much personal fame.

I know these women because they are at every meeting, in every organization and in every story about the social needs and issues in the County. Unfortunately, they are left with the task of telling the negative side of life in Haliburton, the abuse, the neglect, the sadness and the tragedy. It's the Movers and Shakers who get in on all the good things.

Just because their message is sometimes unpleasant to hear, I think they should be given as much credit and recognition as their more popular counterparts get. They may never earn citations or add to the economic growth of the community but isn't there some other way people can know let them know they are appreciated?

If I didn't have these people to interview, I think the Echo would be a very bland and somewhat uninteresting paper. If you want to get to the heart of the community, you have look behind the band giving you the tick, tick, and find the ones who give it the kick, kick.

Goalies kept busy in men's league

Goals have not been in short supply recently in the Haliburton men's hockey league. In three games during the past week, a total of 46 goals have been chalked up, and a number of players have had four and five goal nights.

Last Wednesday, Haliburton Lumber scored an even dozen to trounce Bishop and Wilson 12-3, but the highest scoring game was played Monday night, when the surveyors dropped another decision, this time 13-9, at the sticks of the Debler Drillers. In the Wednesday game, Haliburton Lumber took a two goal lead, Bishop and Wilson replied with three to take the lead, and then the lumbermen took over, driving in 10 unanswered goals.

Chris Hodgson had a five goal night for the lumbermen, while Andy Hodgson was just behind with four. Kevin Philips notched a pair, and the

in her flight.

On the following week-end, some of the Haliburton skaters competed in the Minden 'Meet to Skate' competition. Danielle LaRue finished second in her flight and first in the Juvenile B ladies division. Other results are: Stephanie Sales, fourth in her flight; Jammie Ogle, sixth in her flight; Jennifer Turner, fourth in her flight; Andrea Barry, fourth in her flight and Karen Elstone (who competed against Danielle) second in her flight and sixth overall.

Curtis Reynolds to break the tie. Matthew Galbraith worked hard for the Haliburton I team and scored an unassisted goal soon after the second period was underway. Billy Dovell took advantage of a break a way and scored an important goal to put his team once again on top. Joshua Burk scored the final goal of the game with only 30 seconds remaining. Both teams played an excellent game of hockey.

ing to believe she could make a success out of this marriage.

The violence increased

However, the violence didn't end and increased in both its frequency and show of force (although it's interesting to note that David did not get into any more fights outside the home.) Along with each episode came the plea for forgiveness, the promise of self-control, the commitment to make everything right again. There also came that psychological pressure to stay in the marriage. "How are we going to work on it if we break up?" "You can help me." "Please don't leave me."

"After the violence he and I would talk and then he would sit down with the children." If the violence occurred when the children were near, they would come running in and beg for him to stop. "Now if they were just to hear the two of us raising our voices, they would say 'Don't fight, don't fight.'"

The problem for Elizabeth at first was she didn't know what she was doing to illicit the violence. Maybe all the stuffing from the chicken was gone because he returned home late for dinner. Maybe he saw her talking to some mutual male friend on the street. Maybe she smiled too much when they were at a dance.

"I never thought I was doing anything wrong and it shocked me when I found out I had." Soon she began asking "What's the matter with me?"

As time progressed, she was able to see the danger signs and try to avoid the violence. "I would try to reason with him and sometimes it worked. I used to say 'Do you think it would be okay if someone came around every four to six weeks, beat me up and got away with it?... Do you think they should be charged?' He said yes."

But even if there wasn't violence at the time "it seems he sort of saved it up and added it to the pot." And the verbal abuse was something which could not be ignored easily. "He's quite eloquent with the string of swear words he can put together."

Throughout it all, friends and neighbours remained oddly silent. They knew, but nothing was every spoken. If she found a friend she could trust with her story, they would invariably tell her to leave her husband and wouldn't understand that it wasn't the marriage she wanted to end, just the violence.

A desperate need for help

There were times, however, when she desperately wanted help. Once David learned he could physically and verbally abuse his wife outside without worrying his neighbours would phone the police, he soon lost his inhibitions about keeping the abuse a secret. One day the violence was so bad, Elizabeth ran over to her neighbour's house and pounded on their door, begging for them to phone the police because her husband was beating her up. The neighbours didn't do anything for quite some time and only later let her into the house. "They like him, he does things for them. They don't approve of the violence but they don't want to get involved."

In a way, Elizabeth can understand this reaction. She can remember living in an apartment in the city and every so often, her neighbours would get into a fight. One night the argument got so loud and physical Elizabeth propped a chair underneath her door because she was afraid they were going to come into her apartment. "It never occurred to me to phone the police. They were just fighting again. Now I think it's disgusting and terrible (not to take action)."

As King says, if you saw someone beating up someone else on the street you would try to get help, either by intervening yourself or calling the police as quickly as possible. But when it's a husband and

'With the group I realized it doesn't matter what I do to make him angry, that doesn't give him the right to hit me. I came to realize it wasn't my fault... I've decided I never want to be hit again'

wife in their home, it's seen as a family matter and the man will use that protection to keep on abusing his wife without fear of getting caught.

In no other crime is the victim given such a responsibility when charges are laid. During one violent episode, David taunted to his wife that she could phone the police. Much to his surprise, she did.

"They charged him and then I did my damndest to get them dropped. I know he looked at it as a betrayal. It causes him all these problems—he'd lose his job, he'd go to jail and everybody would know about it."

David did have to spend the weekend in jail before Elizabeth got the police to let him go and he used the experience of jail to convince her that now he was truly reformed. He had seen what it was like in jail and he never wanted to have to return. "We don't want to punish him any farther. He was never going to do it again..." It was the same promises with a new twist.

A promise broken

Of course he did do it again but the next time the police came to the door it was because some other neighbours had heard the fight and phoned the police. David was gone by the time they arrived and Elizabeth was standing in the driveway, her face so badly battered the police decided to take her to the hospital first. By the time they were ready to ask her questions, she wanted to be as far away as possible.

"I changed the story because I didn't want him to be charged." There's a pause as she uses her present knowledge to try to understand an old action. "I don't know why I did that."

"You want the violence to go away without taking it that far," she says after re-collecting her thoughts. (By this time she was involved with King and her self-confidence was building but she didn't phone King until nearly a week had passed.) "It would have been good (to let the charges stick). It would have been out of my hands, I didn't do this to him."

It's not easy for a woman to be responsible for putting her husband behind bars. Wives are supposed to be loving and understanding, not crying for justice even though they might deserve it. There's usually a six month wait between the time charges are laid and the court decision that the abuser should be jailed. That's six months of fear of reprisal and while there are peace bonds and restraining orders, the partner still knows where the house is and that the neighbours are prone to be silent. Besides that, there is also the fear that once he gets out of jail he would take out all of his anger on Elizabeth.

Light amid the darkness

However, in this story of darkness there is light. When visiting the Minden CHACE Place Elizabeth picked up a brochure of the Family Violence Safety Network. She learned that help was available but she didn't phone King's office (457-3355, 24 hours a day) until a violent argument with her husband ended with him saying he was willing to get some help.

On the phone with King, Elizabeth made it sound it was just her husband who needed help "but your voice was indicating you needed some support," says King. She decided to phone the leader of the men's group and that afternoon they drove out to Elizabeth's. King stresses this action was taken only because David had said he would accept outside help. All calls and visits are kept in strict confidentiality and King will tell no one without the woman's approval.

When David heard that she had actually gone ahead and phoned someone, he was stunned. "What?" he yelled. "I didn't mean right away. Why couldn't you have waited?" The remorse and plea for help, which were heartfelt at the time, were already beginning to ebb away.

"You know it's going to cause some turmoil," says Elizabeth of the difficulty of making that first call, but since she had already received counselling in other matters, getting help wasn't as terrifying a proposition. "It wasn't a strange thing for me to do but for others it's scarier." Many women phone King without letting their partners know about it.

After talking to her at the home while David talked to the leader of the men's group, King suggested Elizabeth join the Support Group which met weekly. Now it was Elizabeth's turn to be scared because she had never talked about her problems in a group before. How would she react? How would the other abused women react? It wasn't until there was another episode of violence a few weeks that she decided to give it a try.

"The group was just fantastic," she says a year later. This was the first time she could talk openly and honestly and it was like a great release.

"You just can't turn to friends and acquaintances because they don't understand these things. The group can give you sympathy and understand the problem. The women accept you for what you are. They don't judge and you do the same for them."

"It just felt really cleansing to know that you could share instead of bottling it up inside of you. Talking is a healer."

Each woman had her own story to tell but it soon became apparent there were things they all shared, among them "a feeling that you're not worth a lot, a low self esteem."

Elizabeth had always aware of her self-worth but felt that other people thought she was bad and stupid because she stayed in a violent relationship. "It inhibited me from being my myself" and while she eventually got up enough nerve to venture out of the house when the physical signs of abuse were still visible, she could never look at people straight in the eye. There was that shame again, the feeling of failure. "People thought I wasn't a good person."

"As a community we have to support the victims instead of looking at our own personal values," adds King.

Valuable lessons

By sharing their experiences and talking about their feelings, the women learned a few valuable lessons from each other.

"With the group I realized it was his behaviour and his decision of how he was going to behave. It doesn't matter what I do (to make him angry), that doesn't give him the right to hit me. There may be different reasons but I came to realize it wasn't my fault. He can get angry but he can't go around hitting people."

Remember her initial belief that she could help him by teaching him that's not the way you treat a woman? "It took a long time to realize I can't do it for him; he's got to do it for himself."

For a long time the women in the group just knew each other by their first names but when the trust grew, so did friendships. Now the women know each other's full names and where they live so they often gather at someone's house for a friendly get-together, whether to talk about the violence or not. "There seems to be a bond there" and whatever the economic circumstances of the women—and there are women in all socio-economic classes in the group—all barriers to friendship evaporate.

But what surprised Elizabeth the most was to find out that not only the women of the group were supportive when she finally decided to leave David. All those people who had never said anything before now let her know they would do anything to help.

One problem she thought she was going to have to face was the prospect of losing her job when she told her boss she was going away for a while because of personal problems. Instead of being told she wouldn't have a job when she returned, she heard "It's better than being dead." The company knew the reason why she was going even if she had never told them. "Whenever you're coming back, let us know," she was told.

Support was shown in other ways. Friends agreed to take over some of her responsibilities and everyone chipped in to help. The silence had been broken and Elizabeth was touched.

She's back in the Highlands now but not back with her partner who has agreed to take part in the Men's Group. They talk to each other but no matter what he says, she still can't get rid of her fear of him. Should they ever get back together, Elizabeth hopes she would be able to sense the brewing violence and be able to leave immediately.

"I have decided I never want to be hit again," she says, and even if the violence is just threatened, "That's it, there is no more. I have given one more chance many times but this is absolutely, absolutely the laaaaaast chance."

A desire to help others

As Elizabeth tries to sort out her own relationship, she wants to be able to help other battered women learn that no one, for absolutely no reason, has the right to hit another person. She's come a long way in her evolution towards self-pride and confidence and has spent so much time mulling over things in her mind, she can express her insight into the problem in a way that is both touching and forceful.

"Ever since I left the house I've been interested in the issue. I just know what it was like for me and I feel I've really been helped and I've really been lucky. I want to do anything I can to advertise the Family Violence Safety Network to make people more aware about it."

She has seen the enemy and realized it is not herself.

WANT TO APPEAL YOUR ASSESSMENT?

You still have time to appeal your 1987 assessment if you feel your home or business property has been improperly assessed. Your assessment is important because the amount of property tax you will pay in 1988 depends on it. The assessed value of your property is multiplied by the municipal and school mill rates to determine your property taxes.

Notices of Property Valuation were mailed to all property owners and tenants in the municipality. Open house information sessions were held in your area to give you the opportunity to ask questions and correct any errors.

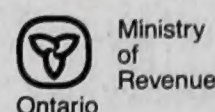

The Assessment Roll was delivered to your municipality on February 16, 1988 and will be used to calculate the taxes you will pay in 1988. You can review the Roll at your municipal office during regular business hours. If you believe your property has been improperly assessed and you have not yet registered an appeal, you still have until March 8, 1988 to mail or deliver your appeal to the Assessment Review Board. And remember, even if you did not receive a Notice of Property Valuation, you still have the right to appeal.

Appeal deadline — March 8, 1988

The Assessment Review Board is an independent tribunal under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Ministry of the Attorney General. It is intended to provide you with an additional opportunity to have your assessment reviewed if, in your opinion, it is not fair and equitable with the assessment of similar properties in your area. The Review Board is more informal and relaxed than a regular court of law. You may present your own case, retain a lawyer, or ask a relative or friend to speak as your agent.

To help you in filing your appeal, Notice of Appeal forms are available from the Assessment Review Board, your Regional Assessment Office, or your municipal office. You can also use the reverse side of a Notice of Property Valuation, or write a letter giving the property address and roll number along with your reasons for appealing. Appeals should be forwarded to the Regional Registrar of the Assessment Review Board at the address shown below.

In those parts of Ontario designated for French Language Services, you can appear before a bilingual (English/French) Appeal Board. Please check the space provided on your appeal form if you wish to use this service.

I'm sorry to report that Pearl Bradimore, wife of Harry Bradimore, suffered a heart attack while at the Legion Bingo last Thursday evening. She was rushed by ambulance to Ross Memorial Hospital and the first couple of days were a very critical time for her. Thankfully, she is bouncing back and seems more 'chipper' each day. I'm sure she'll continue to grow stronger but many have to slow down some! Get well wishes from your friends, Pearl and we'll be happy to hear you are home again.

On Friday February 5, Christina Kerr had a quadruple heart by-pass operation in Tucson, Arizona, where she is spending the winter months. Last reports I heard, Chris is doing well. For her friends who may wish to send her a card, her address is: Christina Kerr, 5549 W Barr X, Tucson Estates, Tucson, Arizona 85713, U.S.A.

The Coboconk Seniors held their usual card games on Tuesday night with the following being winners. Monies raised from sale of clothing has built churches and supported native missionaries in Ghana, Africa. You are welcome to come and hear

Mrs. Archer. Also, remember the Full Gospel Businessmen's Meeting on Friday evening in the Community Hall.

I visited Claire Brooks at Lutterworth Pines, Minden, on Monday last week. Claire has been very sick, and even was too sick to celebrate her February 7 birthday. I saw her again on Wednesday evening and she looked some better.

The Norland Area Bowlers showed some very good scores on Wednesday February 10. Jack Simms bowling a head for his regular league rolled a hefty 655 with Cathy Cooper 515, Marjorie Lee 498, Adrian Lee 496 and three tying their scores of 475, were Gene Crisp, Ross Short and Jack Morrison, who says he is getting a bit of practice for the United Church Bowl-a-thon on Friday February 29. This takes place at Fenelon Lanes, but really I think he has already been practising! Anyhow, lots of luck everyone and we hope to see you out bowling soon!

The Norland Area Seniors and friends braved another stormy night to play euchre with the attendance of 30. Ladies high was Pat Shorter with 62. Parents should urge children to talk should give their support without asking too many questions. "It's not your responsibility to find out whether it's true."

The steps to follow

These are the steps she said parents should follow if their child has been abused. 1. Affirm their feelings without being judgmental. Don't get into why it happened, how it happened, or with whom. 2. Don't presuppose guilt and anger. Just because you as a parent are feeling them, don't assume your child is too. This will only add to their burden of emotions. 3. Support the child and find support in other areas. Legally you have to inform the CAS and it is up to them to determine whether the police should be brought in for an arrest. 4. Don't blame the child. 5. Reassure the child that he or she is safe and then make sure this is true. If you have an idea who it is, or if your child feels the need of protection for certain circumstances, then keep your child in a place where they can't be hurt again. 6. Try to keep your lifestyle as normal as possible. Beds still need to be made and teeth to be brushed. However, don't discuss the abuse in front of everyone, or continually. 7. Don't tell a lot of people. A child's right to privacy must be respected. If other family members or children are in danger however, they should be warned.

She also re-affirmed the five things to say to your child which were introduced in the video: I believe you; I'm glad you told me; it's not your fault; I'm sorry something like this happened to you; and there's something I'm going to do about it.

Often children will think they're giving their parents clear hints that something's wrong, but often these hints will be so small they won't be noticed. It's important you get your child in the habit of talking to you about their activities. For instance, you might ask them how their weekend with the Boy Scouts went and they'll say it was fun. However, with a little more probing, you may find that the Scout leader saw fit to give them all physicals, spending particular attention in the genital area. Or that nice minister who invited the parish children for a swim might have over-stepped his boundaries when that swimming was skinny dipping and everyone was invited back to his house for some nude wrestling. "The child might not recognize what's inappropriate behaviour, but an adult would."

Parents must also be aware of the messages they give their children. "As adults we spend a lot of time and energy to get children to do what we want them to do," and thus we may teach them to do the things other adults want them to do. "Do what your babysitter tells you" may not be the best thing to say if the babysitter wants to sexually molest the child. (There is a sheet about how to choose a good babysitter at the Children's Case Co-ordination office in the Drag River building.)

"Our belief is prevention is the key," said Barb Fraser, the workshop mediator and member of the prevention abuse committee.

One of the concerns expressed at the meeting was an apparent backlash against believing children who have been sexually abused. While most professionals tell you that children do not have the knowledge or terminology with which to invent these things, a lot of noise is being made that children should not be believed. It's a trend that scared a lot of people at the meeting.

"Everyone will start defending the offender," should a case ever be made public, Robertson notices. He goes to church regularly, he has his own children, he's a pillar of society, people will say. Adults just seem to not want to believe that other adults, especially not those dirty-old-men types but honourable and respected citizens, could commit such terrible crimes against children. "It's still not accepted that much."

In all likelihood, the family of the victim are the people who will be ostracized, as if this great social problem is their fault and the child must have done something wrong or is making the whole thing up. Because of this, the speakers urged people to go visit the families of victims should they hear about it, since that sign of support may be a gesture seldom extended to the people who need it most.

Business participants will concentrate on attitudes

The focus in the first half of the session has an "attitudinal slant" said Phelps. Participants will be encouraged to make five key commitments: to take pride in doing the job right; to believe in the golden rule of treating others, including fellow employees and the boss, as you would want to be treated yourself; to care about people and try to make them feel special; to respect other members of the tourism team and be supportive of them; and to go that 'extra mile' to serve customers well and leave them with positive impressions.

In the afternoon, the emphasis will be on six key skills for dealing with people: greeting customers; listening to their needs; answering in a responsive way; asking people if they need other services and suggesting where they may find them; concluding a visit successfully to ensure that a customer leaves in a satisfied frame of mind; and applying professional skills to handle problem situations.

It will be "a very intensive day" said Phelps.

For the second day of the seminar, 10 of the participants from day one will be invited back, and will be trained in how to present the programme to others, principally their staff.

For more information on the seminars, and to register, contact the Chamber of Commerce office in Minden.

Carnival a big success

WILBERFORCE NEWS

when they trounced Haliburton 10-2. The Minor Hockey executive members greatly appreciate the continuous support from the Agnew family toward making this event such a special occasion. This coming week-end the Novice tournament will take place on Sunday February 21 with eight teams competing.

Gooderham reports a most successful week-end with a terrific roast beef dinner at the Community Centre and a well-attended dance. The Fish Derby saw Gary Mintz claiming the trophy for the biggest fish while Dennis Hunter put in a bid for the smallest. Walter Reil was the oldest fisherman and Judy Graham the youngest. There was a mystery prize also and this went to Shirley Johnson of Haliburton.

Here is an item written by Mark Smith and entitled Ladies Night Out. The third annual Wilberforce Ladies Valentine Day Bonspiel, held at the Monmouth Curling Club was again a success. Eight teams from Lindsay, Benoit Lake, Combermere and Wilberforce competed for prizes. These were graciously donated by Silver Springs Cottages, The Variety Store, Agnews Red and White, Elephant Lake Lodge, the Bostonian Motel, Park Cottages, Montague Real Estate and Mary Ann Tighe's Crafts and Gifts.

Fun and companionship were the great attractions for the ladies entering this two day bonspiel. Young, attractive men to wait on their every need was somewhat enticing. Some ladies even came to curl and we saw some great shots. When the teams emerged to claim their prizes, in first place was the only three game winner, the rink of Gerri Waugh that had been sponsored by the Bank of Nova Scotia. Second place went to Susan Montgomery of Lindsay and third spot to Joanne Olszewski of Wilberforce. These were followed by the rinks of Donna Andrechuck of Benoit Lake, Marilyn Hadley of Lindsay, Roberta Walsh of Wilberforce, Donna Murdoch of Combermere and Michele Smith of Wilberforce. The ladies of the Curling Club gratefully appreciated the help of all the people involved and the terrific sponsors. Special mention to Bob Park of IGA who presented each of the ladies with a rose. Happy Valentines Day and we hope to see everyone next year.

Fans filled the seats at the Monmouth Arena to enjoy the Figure Skating presentation of "Grease" on Sunday February 14. Applause was generous for the many entertaining numbers that showed the agility of our young skaters. As usual the little tykes stole the show. Some of the costumes portrayed the 50's period and there were comic routines that provided much laughter. Guest skaters Lisa Carr and Abby Burke from the Minden Skating Club performed very well. Master of Ceremonies, Harry Clark, was in good voice and amused everyone with his funny comments to the skaters. Congratulations to instructor Andrea Donaldson and to all the mothers who helped make this a fine production.

A special event at the Legion Hall on Sunday February 14 was preceded by a dinner prepared and served by Legion members to the ladies. The men had enticed a famous chef from Oshawa to oversee the meal and the results won high praise from all. Guests from Legions in Zone 5 were present. There was a presentation of awards to members of Branch 624, for services rendered over the years. Lloyd Slack, Zone Commander, presented Life Memberships to Pat Gallen and Reg Schofield. Phyllis Gallen and Ron Buxton received pins from Northern Deputy Zone Commander Gene Lockhart for their work as secretaries in the Legion, and first vice president pins to Ed Scott and Reg Schofield. A certificate of merit was presented to Gordon Morrow by Bob Hand, Southern Deputy Zone Commander. Al Monck, president of the Cardiff branch presented 35 year pins to Clem Peters, Ed Scott and Earl Whitney. Harold Floden, president of Branch 624, presented 15 year pins to Ron Buxton, John Jackson, Ed Mumford, Gordon Barnes, Fred Peel, Reg Schofield, Ron Balchin and Ross Agnew. Awards given for members not present were accepted by their friends.

Good news for all baby lovers! Terry and Bart Barnes are happy with the arrival of a fine boy at the Peterborough Civic Hospital on Tuesday February 9. Noland Lloyd, who weighed in at 8 lbs. 6 oz., is a brother for Maren. Grandparents of this treasure are Pat and Lloyd Barnes of Wilberforce and Mary Graham of Irondale.

Reg and Winnie Schield were pleased to hear that their daughter Constance Lyon of Winnipeg has a new little girl who was born Thursday February 12. The little red head has been given the name of Mary Ann. She was born at St. Boniface hospital weighing 7 lb. 4 oz. Dad Gary Lyon is proud of this new addition to the family as are grandparents Robert and Lola Lyon of Duncan, B.C.

Nellie Jones and Mel Hamilton were the high winners at the Highland Grove euchre party. Lone hands went to Irma Dunford and David Lawrence while the lows were claimed by Evelyn Bowen and Peter Shaughnessy. Traveller's prize was taken by Phyllis Bowen.

Greetings! Here are some simple biscuit recipes to go along with those "stick-to-your-ribs" homemade soups and stews. Hope you enjoy them.

BEST CHEESE BISCUITS

2 cups flour
4 tsp. baking powder
2 tsp. white sugar
1/2 tsp. salt
1 cup grated Old Cheddar cheese
1/3 cup cooking oil
3/4 cup milk

Measure first 4 dry ingredients together in bowl. Add grated cheese. Stir. Add oil and milk. Stir to form a soft ball of dough. Add more milk if needed to make dough soft. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead gently 8-10 times. Roll or pat to 1-inch thick. Cut with biscuit cutter. Place on ungreased cookie sheet close together. Dab tops with milk for nicer browning. Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minutes. Makes 1 dozen. CRANBERRY BISCUITS: Omit cheese. Add 1 cup chopped cranberries, fresh or frozen.

COTTAGE CHEESE BISCUITS

2 cups flour
4 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1 tbsp. parsley flakes
1 egg, beaten
1 cup cottage cheese
2 tbsp. cooking oil
1/4 cup milk

In mixing bowl, put flour, baking powder, salt and parsley. Stir to combine. Make a well in center. Beat egg in small bowl. Beat in cottage cheese. Add oil and milk. Stir and pour all at once into well. Stir to form soft dough. Turn out on lightly floured board. Knead gently 8-10 times. Pat or roll to 3/4 inch thickness. Cut with floured cookie cutter. Arrange on ungreased baking sheet, brushing tops with milk to help them brown. Bake at 425 degrees for 10-12 minutes. Makes 1 dozen.

SAVORY SAUSAGE BISCUITS

1/2 pound sausage meat
2 cups flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda

Pour buttermilk into well. Stir quickly to form soft dough. Turn out on floured surface. Knead 8-10 times. Pat or roll to 3/4 inch thickness. Cut into rounds, squares or triangles. Place on ungreased baking sheet. Bake at 450 degrees for 12-15 minutes until browned. Makes 12-15 biscuits.

Lent also a time of giving

CHURCH NOTES

by June Devolin

THIS WEEK I received a "Fourth Day" newsletter from Cursillo and part of the Spiritual Director's message based on Mark 1:14-20 caught my attention. It makes reference to the forty days of preparation for Easter that we will enter on Ash Wednesday February 17.

"As preachers have been known to say: 'the holy season of Lent' is once again upon us. It is therefore time for a close scrutiny of our spiritual condition. Are there instances in my life when I do not respond to the call of Jesus? (NOTE: If you are unable to find any such instances, take another look, you may be missing something.)"

Traditionally Christians have given up something for Lent, some habit, food, or interest that required considerable sacrifice on the person's part. In recent years, however, some Christians have approached Lent from another perspective with the idea of doing something, instead of giving up something.

The invitation quoted above challenges us to respond to needy calls. What can you or I do to respond more obediently to the call of Jesus? A Bible study that I am currently teaching subtitled "Where to find Christs" suggests that one way is through service.

The scripture recommended for study is Matthew 25:31-46, that familiar passage about the final judgement when the "sheep" are separated from the "goats". The sheep are invited "Come, you who are blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. For I was hungry and you gave me something to eat; I was thirsty, and you gave me drink; I am a stranger, and you invited me in; naked and you clothed me; I was sick, and you visited me; I was in prison and you came to me." The goats on the other hand are told "Depart from me, accursed ones, into the eternal fire which has been prepared for the devils and his angels;" because they had not responded to the needy around them. Christ's answer is still the same for us today, "Truly I say to you, to the extent that you did (or did not) do it to one of these brothers of mine, even the least of them, you did (or did not do) it to me."

If you are looking for the idea to centre on during Lent this year, might this one of ministering to the needy be one that you might consider?

Recently I was privileged to see some of the pictures and slides taken by one of the members of the local team who visited Nicaragua in February, to help build houses there. His personal satisfaction at being able to help needy people in that war-torn country, was quite apparent.

We may not all be able to travel to distant mission places but perhaps the following questions for reflection will enable you to see how you can respond to Jesus' call right here at home.

As you think of relatives or neighbours, who comes to your mind as someone in need? How is God suggesting that you serve Christ in that person?

Is our going to people in need to be based on calculations of how helpful we can be or how they are likely to respond?

Book exhibit is unique

GUILD NOTES

by Virginia Muenzel

THIS WEEKEND is going to be very busy at the Rails' End Gallery. We are taking part, not only in the Yamafest activities, but also in the Heritage Day festivities.

Guild volunteers interested are asked to bring their baked goods for the Muffin Mania Sale to the Gallery either Friday afternoon or by 11:00 a.m. on Saturday. Items should be packaged in quantities suitable for one or two people. The Gallery will be serving hot tea, coffee, and cocoa to those cold snowmobilers, along with those Marvelous Muffins.

After their visits to the public library, Stedman's Mall, and Banks General Store, Heritage Day participants should be arriving at the Gallery around 3:30 p.m. Saturday. Outside, they will meet champion log cutter Earle (Buck) Cowen. Inside, they will see a demonstration of traditional crafts by Wendy Bateman, Claire McLeod, and Maggie McClure. There will also be a display of historic toys and photos from the Haliburton Museum.

Of course, while everyone is warming up, they might as well take the time to view the shows in the Main Gallery, and The Waiting Room.

WORDS AND IMAGES will take you on a fascinating journey into the realm of books through the eyes of illustrators, embellishers, and alternative book creators. Don Taylor, Lise Melhorn-Boe, and Lynne Avadenka are represented here. Believe me, you have to see it to appreciate it. It might also be a good idea to come some day when you have time to do some interesting reading.

In the Waiting Room, you will be delighted by FOUND ENCOUNTERS. Andrea Piller has a deep interest in hand-building clay. In her work, she projects personal concerns with references to nature, questioning and exploring the co-existence of humans with nature. Her pieces are very unique and thought provoking.

At 1 p.m. Tuesday March 1, the Gallery will be holding its first Senior's Tea and Tour. These afternoons will be set aside for all our friends within the Senior community, beginning with a brief guided tour of the current exhibit by our curator. After the tour, tea will be served using a tea service donated by Wendy Bateman. Please bring a friend and join us on the first Tuesday of each month.

Finally, would all Guild members who are planning to submit entries into the CELEBRATION 88: Best of members show, please let the curator know of your plans. The entries MUST be in the Gallery no later than March 12. The Guild would be delighted to be able to show the wide variety of the members' fine art and craftwork.

Services explained to seniors

DORSET NEWS

by Phyllis Briscoe

How nice to see groups of deer on the lake so near home. My neighbour, Ron Payne, has a feeding station on the shore and has had as many as 29 deer at one time having their dinner at Ron's hospitality table. They come night and morning and devour the hay and grain that Ron has put out for their sustenance. Lucky animals.

Seventeen month old Samantha Ellerington has a new little brother. William Murray was born at Huntsville Hospital on January 27, weighing 8 lbs. 1 oz. The proud parents are John and Hester Ellerington. Congratulations to the family.

The Foot Clinic will be held next Wednesday February 17. Call 766-2237 for an appointment.

Mrs. Dorothy Everest will be greatly missed by her many friends and acquaintances of long standing, in the area. Dorothy died at the Kitchener-Waterloo Hospital on Sunday January 31 after a long illness. Mrs. Everest had spent her summers at Paint Lake for many years, her first visit being in 1936 and did not miss a summer after that, spending some of the summer at the lake. She was the daughter of Eric Hamilton, who is very well known in the vicinity and spends his summers at Paint Lake. He was brought here by his Mother at the tender age of five months in 1907 and has not missed a summer since. We extend the sympathy of the community to Dorothy's family.

February is Heart month and the canvassers will be knocking on your door. We know you will be kind to them. They give of their time, effort, shoe leather and gasoline, but know that it is a job that has to be done. Research is so necessary and so expensive that canvassers for the various diseases are necessary.

The Dorset Senior Club held an excellent meeting last Wednesday, starting with a luncheon followed by a business meeting. The president, Helen Sutton, gave a report on the Zone 13 meeting which she and the secretary, Mary Fitz-Gibbon, had attended. It was a very complete and interesting account of the proceedings at the meeting. Other items of business were taken care of.

Two guest speakers followed the business meeting. They were Mrs.

Helen Henderson, representing the Haliburton Home Support Services, and Peggy Graham from the Huntsville Home Support Services, which includes the Dorset, Dwight, Baysville area. They explained that their services are for seniors who are living in their own homes but are unable to do their own maintenance work, which among many things would include snow shovelling, grass cutting, heavy cleaning, etc. Anyone requiring meals on wheels may put their name in and as soon as there is a volunteer driver available this service will be started. The number to call for this or any other service is in Haliburton (705)457-2941.

The Huntsville Unit is not involved in Meals on Wheels but for many other service you may call 789-6229. There is a minimal charge for these services.

Children need accurate info

slovenly appearance. The truth, of course, is that it is impossible to know a child molester by appearance. They come from all walks of life, many of them even in positions of trust with children.

Research has also shown that over 80 percent of all crimes against children are committed by someone known to the child, not by someone the child would consider to be a stranger. Creating undue fear in the child's mind of "strangers" then leaves the child open to assault by someone the child knows and trusts.

When speaking to children about personal safety it is more appropriate to teach them how to respond to certain situations rather than giving them a particular profile or image of a "stranger". Research has also shown that those who prey upon innocent children use only a limited number of lures to attract their prey. Children can easily be taught these "lures" and how to respond should they be approached.

Crimes against innocent children will not be prevented by the use of games, gadgets, gimmicks, fingerprint kits or fear generating literature that is becoming too common on the market today. They can be prevented through common sense educational programs in school and in home. For free information on the prevention of crimes against children or on how to establish a preventive program in your community please write to Victims of Violence, Canadian Centre for Missing Children, Provincial Court House, Edmonton, Alberta, T5J 0R2.

Sincerely,

Shari Ure,
Director, Education.

Victims of Violence, Canadian Centre for Missing Children.

People urged to write against clinic

To the Editor:

Despite 2000 community members lighting the darkness with their candles on Tuesday evening as they rallied at the Peterborough Civic Hospital, the Board meeting inside voted 12-4 for the establishment of the first so-called Women's Health Care facility in the province.

Everyone knows that the reality is that these facilities soon to be erected in our midst are nothing but abortion clinics. The schizophrenic rationale of the present government will be paying millions of dollars to kill our Canadian babies in the most gruesome way in clinics adjacent to hospitals where efforts are directed to saving babies declared human only on the basis of their "wantedness".

It is a dangerous and tragic day for Ontario when eight people, deceived by the madness of our age, can facilitate death sentences upon the most defenseless members of our society.

The Family Coalition Party urges everyone who is unhappy with this situation to write today to the Honourable Bill Scott, Federal M.P., Ottawa, Canada, and Prime Minister Brian Mulroney at the same address, strongly requesting, even politely demanding that legislation be enacted immediately to protect our unborn Canadians from the moment of conception. Our society must become responsible and understand that the time for choice is before a woman indulges in intercourse without precautions, not after a little individual has been conceived.

Also write to Mr. John Eakins, Mrs. Elinor Caplan and Mr. David Peterson at Queen's Park, Toronto, Ontario, stating that you are opposed to the use of your tax and OHIP dollars being used for any abortions whatsoever, whether it be in hospital or free standing clinics.

Each individual can make a difference. Nothing is hopeless until we lie down and die.

Diane Robin-Lee,
Family Coalition Party.

Winter games are good for 'creaky joints and bones'

KINMOUNT NEWS

by Millie Moss

Happy birthday to Bill Moss, on February 7 who thoroughly enjoyed his day at Helen Graham's home in Norland. Helen prepared a goose dinner, lemon pies, strawberry/rhubarb pies and a beautiful bell shaped birthday cake. Present for the festivities were Hilda and Jesse Buxcey, Mary and John Pyke, Donna Stroud, Bill Moss Jr., Jason Moss and myself.

Winner of Norland Volunteer Firefighters hockey pool Saturday February 6 was Leonard Greer of Norland. It's good to hear Leonard is now home following a weeks stay in hospital.

Thursday evening February 4, Pearl Bradimore was ill at the Coboconk Legion bingo and was forced to leave very early in the games. She was taken home and later transferred by ambulance to Ross Memorial Hospital in Lindsay following a massive heart attack. Another former resident, Chris Kerr, underwent a quadruple bypass in Arizona, following her heart attack. Our thoughts and prayers go out to both Pearl and Christina as well as Joe England of Norland who is still in hospital in Lindsay. Also to Marj Fountain of Norland who entered Ross Memorial for surgery on Thursday February 11. Jean Barkwell and Everett Cameron, both of Coboconk are also on the ailing list these days. Best wishes to all of you.

Welcome home to Ann Guest who recently spent a couple of weeks with her sister in Edmonton. Watch for Martha Perkin's story on the beautiful Arabian horse owned by Ann Guest and Mr. Todd.

Twelve Kinmount Seniors were part of the one hundred people who attended the Haliburton Winter Games/Tournament for Senior Citizens at Deer Lodge recently. Upon check in tea/coffee and muffins were served as a 'happy hour'. Then followed line dancing which I'm told is very good for 'creaky joints and bones'.

At 10:15 a.m. there were bingo games with winners getting cash and/or chocolates. Then at 11:15 a.m. deer races were thoroughly enjoyed and was lots of fun. Noon time a dinner of full course roast beef was served. Eight euchre games followed. There were all kinds of games including the euchre, bridge, checkers, cribbage and table shuffleboard and there were trophies and diplomas awarded to the tournament winners. At the finish of the deer races, all monies realized were given back to the players by the owners: hot/hostess Mr. and Mrs. Teljeur. Tea/coffee and muffins were again served before the Seniors left for home. The Seniors would like to thank Mr. and Mrs. Teljeur for their hospitality and making it such a fun day. Congratulations to all the Tournament winners.

Results of the nominations/election of officers of the Kinmount Senior Citizens for the year 1988: president—Lil Platt; vice president—Win Wilson; treasurer—Lloyd Crego; secretary—Colleen Byrnes; custodian—Bill Wilson; communications—Joyce Barkwell; trustees—Vi Cook, Bill Wilson, Dick Holbrook and Helen Hickey. Welcome to new member Eileen Shepstone.

That severe storm Thursday February 11 in no way stopped some 34 ladies and gents from getting out to the Coboconk Lions bingo.

Thanks to Rotha Bryant, Win Wilson, Helen Graham and Hilda Buxcey who recently underwent great tests of friendship in hunting for a certain recipe for me. They didn't find the right one, but your efforts were appreciated. My good hubby surprised me by buying a book, so now I really have to get busy!

I enjoyed a sidewalk visit with Jim Taggart last Monday in Fenelon Falls.

Thanks to John LeCraw of Norland who took the time to take Jason and Marie (Jason's teacher/friend) on a tour of his LeMac Printing Establishment in Fenelon Falls on Thursday February 11. Both Jason and Marie told me they enjoyed it very much and thanks also for the name/address printing stamp. They say they will use it for many writings etc.

Well folks, stay well and happy, read the Echo and call me at 488-2353.

Seniors test their mettle at games

HOME SUPPORT

On Monday February 8, 100 local older adults attended the Second Annual Winter Games Day held at Deer Lodge Resort. On arrival at Deer Lodge we were welcomed by our hosts, Marilyn and John Teljeur with coffee and warm muffins.

At 10:45 our Drop-In Centre Line Dancing Group did an excellent presentation of their dances with everyone joining them for the "Chicken Dance". A full-course roast beef dinner was served at 12:30 and thoroughly enjoyed by all. In the afternoon everyone settled into three tournaments for medals and certificates.

The day concluded with an awards ceremony. Deer Lodge Resort provided the medals and certificates for first, second and third place winners.

The recipients were: Bridge—first place medal winners Steward Montgomery and Mike Collins; second place certificate winners—Don and Elva Robinson; third place certificate winners—Gwen Taylor and Vi Smith. Euchre—first place Gladys Reid and Bessie Burk; second place—Ev Henderson and Mac Trudeau; third place—Ruby and Dick Holbrook; most lone hands (7)—Anne and Keith Winger. Table shuffleboard—first Ed Fugar.

This is becoming an annual event and if you would like to participate next year call the Drop-In Centre (457-2171) early in January 1989.
